

FLAG LOCK

Abstract

A flag lock is an approximately flat plate that has a middle section between two larger end sections. A flag display has a flag having at least one eyelet with an aperture therethrough, a halyard, and a flag lock having end sections that can not pass through the apertures. Loops of the halyard pass through the apertures and over the middle sections of the flag lock.